

The Letters of “Raintree County”: A Database of People Mentioned in Correspondence to Nineteenth-Century Hoosiers

Compiled by James B. Cash

In 1947 Jimmy (James B.) Cash and his cousin Stevie (John Stephen) Burris discovered a cache of old family letters in the attic of their grandparents' home in New Castle, Indiana. The letters were primarily written to and from family members in Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Henry County, Indiana, and were divided between the two cousins, who originally hoped to salvage the old stamps and sell them. In 2002 Cash began devoting himself to the letters in his possession, transcribing them and cataloging biographical data on the people mentioned within. The result is the Raintree County Letters Project, which consists of letter transcriptions; an extensive written compilation of biographical and historical information on the people, events, and places mentioned in the letters; and a biographical overview of the material in database form.

An article by Cash, further detailing the project and its contents, will be published in the fall/winter 2008 issue of The Hoosier Genealogist: Connections. The original letters and copies of Cash's transcriptions were acquired by the Indiana Historical Society and are being digitized. They will be available to researchers in March 2009, online through the Web site of the Society's William Henry Smith Memorial Library.

The related database published here in Online Connections was compiled originally to keep track of those 311 people mentioned or otherwise featured in the compiler's set of letters. The data is based upon the best information that the compiler could find in sources such as census records, county histories, military records, and so forth. Approximately one-fourth of the material was fact-checked by Family History Publications staff, but data may still be incomplete or incorrect. In publishing the database, the compiler hopes to obtain from others who are interested suggestions for correcting or amending the database. Such information may be sent to James B. Cash, 3613 Twinbrook Lane, Kettering, Ohio 45429.

Explanation of Database Fields

Name

The names of the 311 people mentioned or implied in the letters are listed in alphabetical order by last name. Within a group of people with a particular surname, however, the entries are not alphabetical by first names.

The known first name is given. Sometimes spellings vary; also, people sometimes reversed their first and middle names. When known, maiden names are indicated by parentheses around a surname.

The middle name was often significant, indicating familial relationship or admiration for personal virtues or political views, as in George Washington, Benjamin Franklin, or Thomas Jefferson. Several families with German American surnames named their sons after George Washington; Democrats named their sons after Thomas Jefferson and may have supported his ideas in regard to independent small farmers and limited government. Only two are named for Andrew Jackson, and one seems named after Thomas Hart Benton, a sometime-friend and rival of Jackson.

There is a great deal of spelling variation in last names, especially with German names; the compiler tried to use the most common one.

Birth Date

A specific birth date is given when it is available and seems reasonably accurate. Not surprising, most of those included in the database were born in the 1800s. One was born about 1540, four in the 1600s, thirty-nine in the 1700s, and seven in the 1900s. Twenty dates of birth are unknown but are most likely in the 1800s. For those without specific birth dates, the years were inferred from the census or other sources; therefore, the year could be plus or minus one year. If the year is guessed there is a question mark; if it is inferred from other information there is an approximate mark (~).

Nationality

This category generally refers to the nationality of one or both parents of the person listed. There is some ambiguity with German Swiss, who may be classified as German because they have German language names, and Scots-Irish, who commingled with the Irish. Most of the Irish people listed were Protestants and probably Scots-Irish, but some were Protestant Irish, especially Quakers. The purpose of this field is to get at the culture of families and individuals; the database shows some cultural variation, although in the compiler's opinion, in the late 1700s and early 1800s the country showed signs of creating a unique American culture.

Sibling Order

One of the compiler's observations in writing about the 311 people listed in the database is the effect of sibling order on lives, so he documented this where known. The numerator is the subject's birth order, and the denominator is the number of total children in the family. In certain instances parents had more than one family. This would change family dynamics, and in such cases the database lists first or second family.

Married

Of those whose marital status is known, 181 were married, 53 were not, 2 were divorced, and 2 were separated.

Spouse 1 and Spouse 2

Names are included when known. Sometimes last names are inferred.

Father from, Mother from

These are interesting fields that help show migration patterns.

Residence 1, 2, and 3

Residences for the people listed in the database are generally shown by county and state, although in some instances only the state is known. For some, three residences are known. For others the locations of birth and death are known, but places they lived in between are not known. In these cases, the Residence 2 field is blank. Some of the people, especially military professionals or adventurous young men, lived in eight or ten residences; in such instances the compiler tried to pick what he considered the three most important places. This information is valuable in showing migration patterns and economic opportunities.

Military

Fifteen known Confederate soldiers and ninety-nine U.S. soldiers (most volunteers) of the Civil War are included in the database. One can read unit histories in official Civil War records. The main Confederate unit listed is the Fifty-seventh Virginia recruited in Franklin County, Virginia, and the surrounding area. It was a key unit under General Robert E. Lee and was a part of Major General George E. Pickett's charge at Gettysburg. All the soldiers from the Fifty-seventh Virginia were killed, wounded, or captured. The main Union units mentioned in the letters are the Thirty-sixth, Fifty-seventh, and Eighty-fourth Indiana; they fought mainly in Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, and Georgia.

Occupation 1, 2, and 3

In general, the main occupations of the individuals are listed in these fields as there is not always room to show all the occupations practiced by each individual throughout a lifetime. These fields show a general trend away from farming to town- or city-based occupations, reflecting national trends during the latter part of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries.

Religious Background and Religion

The population of people listed in the database is diverse, reflecting a strong Pennsylvania, Mid-Atlantic component, with membership in German and mid-European sects of religious groups such as Moravians, Mennonites, and Dunkers and small but important British sects (including Welsh, Scots, and Irish) such as the Quakers. People who belonged to such small sects, who came to America primarily for religious freedom, are probably over-represented in this database. These fields also reflect the growth of the Methodist and Baptist churches in the 1800s. When known, subsects are listed, such as the Anti-Missionary (Primitive) Baptists and Wesleyan Methodists. There is also a small group of freethinkers.

Politics 1, 2, and 3

These fields show the evolution of political beliefs in an individual over time (if any). Part of the reason for having three fields is to cover the Whigs. Some Whigs evolved to the anti-slavery Free Soilers and then to the Republican Party. This reflects the political turmoil of the nineteenth century, the antislavery crusade, and the Civil War and its aftermath. In general, it appears to the compiler that Democrats were more stable in their allegiances.

Death, Cause, and Age

All of these entries are specific when known. If a birth date is unknown, the corresponding age at death may be off slightly; causes of death were often not given before the 1900s. Age is given as cause of death if the person is more than seventy-five years of age.

Why in Database

The database began with thirty-one letter or document writers and five recipients. Most of the rest of the people listed in the database were mentioned in the letters. A few of these are mysterious people, with misspelled names, initials or first names given only, or uncertainty as to place(s) of residence. Some of those listed in the database were implied but not mentioned specifically in the letters; and some people were included in the database because of relationships they had with or significance they had for people mentioned in the letters. The abbreviation "Compl story" is used to indicate that an individual is included in order to complete the story of one or more of the people mentioned in the letters.

Part in Project

The Raintree County Letters Project has four parts: 1) Letters of a Virginia Family; 2) Pennsylvania Dutch Letters; 3) Letters from Indiana Soldiers in the Civil War; and 4) A Quiet Ending. The field "Part in Project" tells which part of the project the individual is associated with. Some are in more than one part.
